Theologian presents The Da Vinci Code's deception

Denver Archdiocese holds lecture May 1

In response to The Da Vinci Code's fictitious portrayal of the Roman Catholic Church, the Archdiocese of Denver announces a presentation by Dr. Ted Sri, author of *The Da Vinci Deception.

Dr. Sri's lecture "The truth about The Da Vinci Code: separating fact from fiction" will highlight and correct the various myths and misconceptions in the novel. Specifically, Sri will touch upon Scripture, Jesus and Mary Magdalene, and early Christianity.

The Da Vinci Deception has sold over 90,000 copies in the first two months since its release to the public. The book will be available for purchase at the lecture.

The lecture will take place Monday, May 1, 2006 at 7:30 pm in Bonfils Hall, located at 1300 S. Steele St., Denver, 80210. Admission is free and open to the general public.

Dr. Sri currently teaches theology at Benedictine College in Atchison, Kansas. He has recently accepted a graduate teaching position with the Archdiocese of Denver's Augustine Institute. He will begin his new position at the outset of the fall 2006 semester.
